Outlook celebrates a great deal of activity and development work on the All Saints campus.

This month, I would like to celebrate stillness. In the quietness of the chancel in Church we are exhibiting eight alabaster sculptures, each reflecting on different stages of grief. Loss of different kinds may cause us fear or distress, but the beauty of these statues helps us to do two things. First, we face up to the difficulties, while moving on towards hope. Secondly, by quietly admitting our frailty in a safe space, somehow we revel in life even more. Amidst all our important activity, this exhibition (open Weds & Sats until Easter, and by appointment through the Parish Office) is there for you if you would like to pause for such reflection. Comments are invited in a visitors' book. All, of any faith, are welcome. (Sculptures "Good Grief: Bald Statements" by Jean Parker MA). David.

All Saints Youth Project visit to Highbury Park

More pictures from the February half term; we took a group down to Highbury Park with Liz Wright from the Highbury Orchard Community CIC. She showed them the grounds that had been cleared (through volunteer effort) and invited ideas for how the space could be used. We are hoping to include young people in the project and provide some manpower in helping realise some of these ideas. We introduced 2 new youth workers to the team:

Scott Bradley and Sam Fleming. We had 7 young leaders, too. Several of the new young people have started attending our term time sessions (Inclusion and Drop In). Kiu Wai Lam Mentoring Development Worker
